Question 4

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

There was but one tree in the street known as Gali Ramnath, an ancient banyan that had grown through the cracks of an abandoned mosque—and little Ali's kite had caught in its branches. The boy, barefoot and clad only in a torn shirt, ran along the cobbled stones of the narrow street to where his grandfather sat nodding dreamily in the sunshine of their back courtyard.

'Grandfather!' shouted the boy. 'My kite has gone!'

The old man woke from his daydream with a star; and raising his head, displayed a beard that would have been white had it not been dyed red with mehendi leaves.

'Did the twine break?' he asked. He knew that kite twine was not what it used to be.

'No, Grandfather, the kite is stuck in the banyan tree.'

The old man chuckled. 'You have yet to learn how to fly a kite properly, my child. And I am too old to teach you, that's the pity of it. But you shall have another.'

He had just finished making a new kite from bamboo paper and thin silk, and it lay in the sun, firming up. It was a pale pink kite, with a small green tail. The old man handed it to Ali, and the boy raised himself on his toes and kissed his grandfather's hollowed-out check.

'I will not lose this one,' he said. 'This kite will fly like a bird.' And he turned on his heels and skipped out of the courtyard.

The old man remained dreaming in the sun. His kite shop was gone, the premises long since sold to junk dealer; but he still made kites, for his own amusement and for the benefit of his grandson, Ali. Not many people bought kites these days. Adults disdained them, and children preferred to spend their money at the cinema. Moreover, there were not many open spaces left for the flying of kites. The city had swallowed up the open grassland that had stretched from old fort's walls to the river bank.

But the old man remembered a time when grown up men flew kites, and great battles were fought, the kites swerving and swooping in the sky, tangling with each other until the string of one was severed. Then the defeated but liberated kite would float away into the blue unknown. There was a good deal of betting, and money frequently changed hands.

Kite-flying was then the sport of kings, and the old man remembered how the Nawab himself would come down to the riverside with his retinue to participate in this noble pastime. There was time, then, to spend an idle hour with a gay, dancing strip of paper. Now everyone hurried, in a heat of hope, and delicate things like kites and daydreams were trampled underfoot.

- a. Give the meaning of each of the following words as used in the passage. One word (3) answers or short phrases will be accepted.
 - i. disdained ii. severed iii. trampled
- b. Answer the following questions briefly in your own words.
 - i. Describe the street Gali Ramnath.
 - ii. Where did the child lose the kite?
 - iii. What did the old man give the child? Describe it.
 - iv. Why did the old man still make kites?
 - v. Why did people not buy kites anymore?
- c. In not more than 50 words narrate the memories of kite flying that the old man had. (8)

Question 5

a. In the following passage, fill in each of the numbered blanks with the correct form of the word given in the brackets. Do not copy the passage but write in the correct serial order the word or phrase appropriate to the blank space.
